

ABSTRACT

A wireless keyboard with a built-in web camera, which allows a user to input text data and image data without being locally restricted by a wired connection to the computer. According to one preferred embodiment, a wireless keyboard with a built-in web camera is provided, comprising: a first input part for transmitting input key data inputted by a user to a user terminal device, a second input part for transmitting an image signal inputted from the web camera to the user terminal device, a packet generator for receiving the input key data and/or the compressed image signal and producing at least one packet according to a predetermined method, and a transmitter for transmitting the packet to a user terminal device.